

Sinclair Broadcasting should not be able to call their piece on John Kerry as a "documentary" because unless it has factual backup, then it is not classified as a documentary, but rather an "op-ed" piece. This is my primary objection; that opinion and doctrine can be given under the guise of "news" and facts. Due to the plethora of news media mixing opinion with fact, the FCC should have guidelines as to what is classified as factual and what is opinion.
